

ABSTRACT

In a hot air heater, heating wires 3a and 3b are wound around an insulating fire-resistant substrate such that electric current running through the heating wires 3a and 3b travels in 5 opposite directions to cancel out electromagnetic waves generated by the heating wires 3a and 3b, thereby reducing the electromagnetic waves emitted from the hot air heater.